

Military parents voice education concerns to leaders

by Elaine Wilson

American Forces Press Service

FORT BELVOIR, Va. (AFNS) - Top U.S. and military leaders took part in a roundtable discussion with parents at the elementary school here today to gain greater insight into the education challenges military families face.

Among the participants were Deputy Defense Secretary William J. Lynn III; Dr. Jill Biden, wife of Vice President Joe Biden; Education Secretary Arne Duncan; Army Chief of Staff Gen. George W. Casey Jr., and his wife, Sheila; military parents; and other military and school officials.

The challenges the military education system encounters mirror those encountered by the nation, whether in recruiting and training good teachers, raising standards, or obtaining money for construction and renovation, Mr. Lynn said in opening remarks.

In addition, the military faces two distinct challenges: frequent moves and multiple deployments, he said.

With every move, families must work to solve problems ranging from ensuring their children adjust to a new environment to making sure records move swiftly and correctly from one school to another, Mr. Lynn said.

Deputy Defense Secretary William J. Lynn III speaks during a meeting June 22, 2010, at Fort Belvoir Elementary School, Va. Mr. Lynn, Education Secretary Arne Duncan, Dr. Jill Biden, wife of Vice President Joe Biden, Army Chief of Staff Gen. George W. Casey Jr. and others visited the school to meet with servicemembers and spouses to discuss the challenges impacting military children and families.

other, Mr. Lynn said.

Additionally, military families often face multiple deployments, with one or both parents gone for six months to a year.

"That sets up a particular challenge for our schools, for military families," Mr. Lynn said. "How do we support those kids when one or both parents are deployed?"

The military parents voiced concerns on a variety of education-related issues, ranging from school transfer difficulties to the need for improved teacher training within Defense Department and public schools.

Kathryn Griffin, whose husband is in the Virginia National Guard, expressed concern for guard children, whom she worries get lost in public schools where teachers may not receive the special training they need to detect when children are experiencing problems due to a deployment or other military challenge.

Madeline Lanza, an Army spouse, echoed Mrs. Griffin's concerns, pointing out that many teachers lack the experience and training to recognize military-related problems in students.

Her husband deployed last May, she explained, and her child went through some rough spots.

Mr. Lynn addressed training in an interview after the roundtable.

"The general issue is to get both training to the teachers who are dealing with the kids in the classrooms ... and the kind of counselor support so the teacher doesn't spend all their time with just a couple of students who are having challenges," Mr. Lynn said. "Partly that's training, and partly that's resources."

Renae Robinson, a Navy spouse, urged leaders to consider making it mandatory for servicemembers to notify the school of an impending deployment. That way, school officials will be able to look for signs of trouble and offer much-needed resources to students.

Also, deployment classes and counseling should be made part of the curriculum in school, rather than offered as an option, she said.

Mrs. Robinson also pointed out the difficulties of transferring between schools in different states.

The Interstate Compact on Educational Opportunity for Military Children has eased some of these difficulties, she said, but not enough people know about the compact or how it can help them. The compact is a cooperative effort among states to address some of the administrative challenges military children run into when moving to a new school.

Secretary Duncan noted that officials are working to establish common standards across all states. Overall, the roundtable emphasized the importance of addressing education issues within the military, Mr. Lynn noted.

"We need to work with those kids (who have parents who are deployed) and address what is a very challenging situation for them," Mr. Lynn said. "It can obviously impact how they do in school."

NW Art Center July exhibit

The pastel paintings of Sheila Rieman, Sentinel Butte, will be featured in the Northwest Art Center's Hartnett Hall Gallery at Minot State University July 2 through August 5, 2010.

Reiman describes the exhibit as "a diary of my studio." The paintings represent current work, with subjects such as grazing bison, wildlife, her horses, and light-infused North Dakota landscapes.

"I enjoy the process of visually translating what I see, primarily through my use of color," states Rieman. "My subjects, as always, are reflective of my interests and my life."

Rieman was born in Minnesota and raised north of Valley City, North Dakota. She studied art and animal science at NDSU from 1976-81 and has been a working artist ever since. Her work has received top awards in many national juried exhibitions across the country and has been featured on the cover of American Artist magazine. Her work is in hundreds of private and corporate collections in the U.S. and abroad.

Rieman is a signature member of the Pastel Society of America and the Montana Painters Alliance. She teaches workshops nationwide and served as juror for several exhibitions, including the 2008 Pastel Society of New Mexico national show. She built her studio in her horse pasture near Sentinel Butte to provide the quiet privacy in which she likes to work, surrounded by the land and subjects she loves to paint.

The exhibit is free and open to the public. Parking in campus lots is unrestricted after 4 p.m. This program is funded in part by a grant from the North Dakota Council on the Arts, which receives funding from the state legislature and the National Endowment for the Arts.

"Bubba Sleeping," above and "Cottonwood" by Sheila Rieman, will be on display July 2 through August 5 at the Northwest Art Center's Hartnett Hall Gallery.

Services work to learn more about brain ailments, suicides

by Lisa Daniel

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON (AFNS) - Post-traumatic stress, traumatic brain injury and suicides among servicemembers are interrelated problems requiring holistic prevention methods and more scientific study, military leaders told a Senate panel June 22.

The vice chiefs of the Air Force and Navy, the Marine Corps' assistant commandant and a Veterans Affairs Department health official also spoke before the committee. All agreed with General Chiarelli that the Defense and Veterans Affairs department officials are coordinating better than ever to diagnose and treat brain injuries and mental disorders, and that much more is known about such conditions today than when combat operations began after Sept. 11, 2001.

Still, they acknowledged, much more needs to be done. They noted that suicides are highest among ground forces. The Army reported 162 confirmed suicides last year, up from 140 in 2008 and 115 in 2007. The Marine Corps reported 52 suicides last year -- more per capita than the Army, and up from 42 in 2008 and 33 in 2007. Last year's numbers are expected to rise as more investigations are completed, officials said.

While the military officers cited increased deployments and less time at home as one area of stress, many more risk indicators such as personal problems with relationships, legal matters and careers are also factors, they said.

In the Army, 79 percent of suicides were by servicemembers who had one or no deployments, and 60 percent were on their first deployment, General Chiarelli said.

Also, General Chiarelli said, suicides among active-duty Soldiers have dropped while simultaneously increasing among reserve-component Soldiers, especially National Guard members.

The guard Soldiers require a different approach toward intervention, he said, since no standardization exists for services and treatment once they return to their home states.

One improvement, he said, would be for guardsmen to remain on Tricare Plus health care coverage for a continuum of treatment.

The senior officers outlined risk factors for suicide among servicemembers, but only the Marine Corps has seen wide commonality in those who took their own lives.

Among Marine suicides last year, 92 percent were between the ages of 17 and 23, and were mostly white men, Gen. James F. Amos said. He added that 67 percent of Corps members are 25 or younger.

"We are woefully more immature in years," the general said. "That, in and of itself, is a problem."

Of the 52 suicides among Marines last year, nine had never been in combat, General Amos noted. "While there is no single answer," he said, "we are committed to exploring every potential solution and every resource we have available. We will not rest until we turn this around."

In the Air Force, only 20 percent of suicide victims had been deployed in the year before they died, Gen. Carrol H. Chandler told the committee.

But 70 percent of those who committed suicide were found to have problems in their personal relationships, and many had legal problems, he said.

The officers outlined the increasing number of programs the services have adopted to try to curb suicides. They include training that begins in boot camp, focuses heavily on noncommissioned officers, and extends to senior flag officers; increasing pre- and post-deployment evaluations; embedding mental health workers in deployed units; reaching out to families with training and telephone hotlines; and trying to improve the diagnosis and treatment of TBI and post-traumatic stress disorder.

The services are increasingly extending programs to build resilience in military members and their families to cope with whatever stresses might arise, the military officers told the committee.

Preauthorization required for skilled nursing facility care

FALLS CHURCH, Va.

- A new requirement means that skilled nursing facilities will have to preauthorize care provided to Medicare-eligible TRICARE beneficiaries once Medicare benefits are exhausted and TRICARE becomes the primary health coverage.

Preauthorization is only required for skilled nursing facility care when medically-necessary skilled nursing services extend beyond Medicare's 100-day limit and TRICARE becomes the primary payer for a beneficiary.

Since medical documentation must be submitted, the preauthorization is requested by the skilled nursing facility and should not be a burden to beneficiaries or their families.

In fact, since a TRICARE coverage determination will be provided prior to extended lengths of care being incurred, dual-eligible beneficiaries of Medicare and TRICARE will have the benefit of better planning for their extended health care needs.

Medicare and TRICARE cover medically-necessary skilled nursing care and rehabilitative therapies, including room and board, prescription medication and laboratory work, which are provided in the skilled nursing facility. However, Medicare covers only the first 100 days of skilled nursing facility care, while TRICARE For Life covers treatment as long as it is medically necessary and is a TRICARE covered service.

For skilled nursing care benefits to be covered, the facility must be Medicare-certified and enter into a participation agreement with TRICARE. Beneficiaries must have a qualifying hospital stay of at least three consecutive days, not including the day of discharge.

Beneficiaries must also enter the skilled nursing facility within 30 days of being discharged from the hospital and the care must meet TRICARE medical necessity guidelines.

Peace Fest this weekend at International Peace Garden

By Kholiswa Neufeld & Kathy McGhan

International Peace Garden

Situated in the International Peace Garden on the American and Canadian border, and nestled in the beautiful Turtle Mountains, the annual International Festival for Peace draws American's and Canadian's together every last weekend in June.

This is the IFP's 27th year and it's again shaping up to be a wonderful event. Setting out with the purpose of uniting North Americans over topics of peace, the International Festival for Peace (IFP) prides itself in encouraging people from both sides of the border to enjoy each other's company, music and games, share stories and exchange ideas in a way that works towards creating a bright future of cooperation and sustainable innovation. The IFP combines a celebration of personal, national and international unity; giving serious consideration to the principals of non-violent conflict resolution and the relationships we form with our environment and neighborhoods.

This year's theme, 'Sustainability: Self-reliance together' is all about becoming more aware of our local environment, the concerns of our neighbours, what resources we have and finding healthy ways to interact with all of it. It's a festival and so we make it a celebration of hope and strength and creativity. It's usually a great mix of older folks, singles, families and lots of teenagers and youth.

The weekend will feature various workshops and presentations by local initiatives and individuals from both sides of the border. Some of these include Capoeira, composting, a storyteller, local history, bike maintenance, and a feature concert on Friday night by acclaimed Winnipeg folk artist Del Barber.

The International Peace Garden is a wonderful location to hold a festival intended to draw Americans and Canadians together. The Garden is situated between the two countries rather than on the border.

No one actually enters the other country when visiting the Garden. In this way it is wonderfully neutral and available to all citizens of both countries, and so the festival offers us opportunities to get to know each other across our political, rather than environmental or emotional, border.

In the spirit of creating community the festival is a free event run completely by volunteers and donations from attendees and local supporters. That being said: The Friday night concert is $12 per attendee, proceeds going to support the artist. And the Capoeira workshop is a $10 fee per participant. The weekend is full of experiences and there are various activities throughout Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

• If you are uncomfortable or unable to pay either fee, but would still like to participate or attend the concert or the Capoeira, please contact the festival and we can make an arrangement. There is no need to forgo an experience for lack of cash.

The IFP provides food for the weekend, but, you are encouraged to bring a dish to the Friday night potluck and a soup, if you are able, to the Saturday lunch soup bar.

Contact and further information: Kholiswa Neufeld: in-ternationalpeacefest@gmail.com, 1-204-534-2303 (Boisevain Manitoba, Canada), Del Barber: www.myspace.com/delbarber or International Peace Garden: http://www.peacegarden.com/

The International Peace Garden is located on the border about an hour south of Brandon, Manitoba (Hwy#10) and an hour northeast of Minot, North Dakota (Hwy#3).

The IFP is held in the Historic Lodge in the International Peace Garden.
